FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE February 15, 2017

Workstead to Show 'Signal Collection' at the Architectural Digest Design Show

New York, NY - Workstead will be exhibiting, for the first time, at the Architectural Digest Show in New York from March 16th to March 19th. On display, the studio will exhibit the launch of the Signal Collection, alongside the Orbit Lighting Series and Spool Furniture Collection.

The Signal Collection distills a sequence of globes into their most iconic states, like a series of hieroglyphs. Metal and acrylic forms create graphic compositions that are both familiar and new. A pull chain holds a slender rod, giving each piece a jewel-like presence. The palette is minimal but rich, as the matte glass shades counterbalance the uniform application of brass, nickel, and blackened metal.

Workstead is a design studio that focuses on buildings, interiors, and products. Our lighting and furniture collections are a natural extension of the studio's interest in utility, form, and material strength. Our products are functional and iconic, balancing a dialogue between new and old. They cast a new light on durable and time-tested materials - steel, wood, cast iron, and brass - through a careful interpretation of forms and their embedded sculptural functions. Minimal in spirit, but flexible in use, the collections can be found in shops, restaurants, hotels, and residences all over the world.
