"Watch a plant grow, and you see its intention is perfect.

It uses just the right shape, amount of color, and texture to fulfill its pliant, living design. I strive to emulate this biosophy in clay."

Fresh from her residency in Dehua China, Robbie Heidinger presents her new line of ceramic vessels. In China Robbie continued her exploration of organic forms adding new techniques adopted in "The Porcelain City". The work she presents this Spring is a merging of this cultural exchange and her continued exploration of organic modernist form.

Robbie's studio is in Western, Massachusetts. Her work is fired in an atmospheric soda kiln, built by Robbie in 2006, giving each piece its unique glow. The forms are crafted with slips and glazes to catch flames, adding burnt edges and glossy sides giving each piece individual character
